

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

An electronic device includes a body, and a battery detachably connected to the body to supply various components in the body with current. The battery includes a memory unit to store information. The memory unit is, optionally, connected to another device. According to such configuration, the electronic device can be portable to easily store required information via the memory unit installed on the battery anytime and anywhere.